AVANT-PROPOS

Réalisme et abstraction, immobilité et action, douceur et violence, maîtrise et abandon : c'est dans l'ambivalence et le paradoxe que réside le caractère esthétique et troublant de l'œuvre d'Andy Denzler, une œuvre qu'il produit à la manière d'une chorégraphie en plusieurs actes.

Andy Denzler exprime dans son art réalisme et immobilité car il travaille à partir de photographies qu'il réalise lui-même. Il utilise des photographies de paysages, des portraits de gens qui l'entourent, créant ainsi des miroirs de séquences de la vie quotidienne dans sa simplicité.

L'artiste exprime aussi la maîtrise car il commence par fidèlement utiliser ses photographies comme trame pour peindre sur toile ou sur papier avec des empâtements de peinture à l'huile. Il adoucit ensuite l'image obtenue en la floutant de manière délicate, grâce aux couleurs utilisées et à la justesse de son pinceau.

Enfin, son art est mouvement, violence et abandon, car Denzler vient finalement déranger, blesser et accidenter l'unité du support et de la matière par de grandes incisions ou rainures à la spatule ou au couteau. C'est alors au spectateur de redéfinir l'image qui effleure l'abstraction. Ce même cheminement est utilisé dans son travail sculptural en bronze.

Andy Denzler compare lui-même son travail à des arrêts sur image d'un film lu à partir d'une cassette VHS : l'image n'est pas tout à fait nette car elle a été instantanément gelée alors qu'elle était encore en mouvement. Elle devient cinématographique, elle est déformée et brouillée, elle oscille légèrement, l'action devrait continuer mais l'artiste a appuyé sur « pause ». Ce n'est pas l'histoire du film dans son intégralité que dépeint l'artiste, mais seulement certaines séquences de celui-ci.

Andy Denzler est un artiste suisse né en 1965, qui vit et travaille à Zurich. Ses œuvres ont été exposées dans des galeries et musées en Europe, aux Etats-Unis et en Asie et font partie de prestigieuses collections privées et publiques dont le Ludwig Museum à Coblenze, le Crédit Suisse ou encore la Burger Collection à Hong Kong.

C'est avec un immense plaisir qu'Opera Gallery Genève invite le public à découvrir des œuvres à la fois fascinantes et troublantes de cet artiste hors normes.

FOREWORD

Realism and abstraction, immobility and motion, softness and violence, control and abandonment: the aesthetic and unsettling nature of Andy Denzler's art lies in ambivalence and paradox, an art practiced like a choreography in several acts.

Denzler expresses realism and immobility as he works from photographs that he takes himself. He uses photos of landscapes, portraits of people he knows, mirroring sequences of everyday life in its simplicity.

The artist also expresses control as he starts by faithfully using his own photography as a draft to paint on canvas or on paper with impasto oil. He then softens the painting by delicately distorting the image, with the colours he uses and the precision of his paintbrush.

Lastly, his art is motion, violence and abandonment as he eventually disturbs and injures the unity of the medium and the paint texture with a palette knife or a spatula. It is then up to the viewer to redefine the image which grazes abstraction. He follows this same path to create his bronze sculptures.

Andy Denzler compares his work to a frozen image of a movie watched from a VHS tape: the image is not really clear because the tape was instantly stopped. It becomes cinematic, distorted and hazy, it slightly oscillates, the action should go on but the artist pressed the "pause" button. It is not the whole movie that the artist depicts but only a few sequences of the movie.

Andy Denzler is a Swiss artist born in 1965 who lives and works in Zurich. His work has been exhibited in galleries and museums in Europe, the United States and Asia. They are part of prestigious private and public collections such as the Ludwig Museum in Koblenz, the Credit Suisse or the Burger Collection in Hong Kong.

Opera Gallery Geneva is pleased to invite you to discover some fascinating and unsettling art pieces by this outstanding artist.
